Murder of Joel Johnston by a Bad Guiteau Trial

Washington, December 28.—Guiteau came into court this morning looking paler than usual. He had not slept well. A man was placed in a cell near his who was suffering from a most violent type of mania caused by excessive use of morphine, and during the whole night his shricking went through the jail. Guiteau was annoyed and asked what was the occasion for such a riot.

The keeper replied: We've got a crazy man on our hands to-night.

The witness visited the prisoner in jail and also closely observed the prisoner in court, and believed him sane. He didn't believe deity ever inspired to kill a fellow creature, and any one who labored under such an insane delusion would show it in acts and not by words. In answer-ing the hypothetical questions he said the prisoner was undoubtedly sane.

Scoville with much feeling protested against the proposition of the District Attorney, which could not be understood by any one, as other than an invitation to all who heard it to shoot the prisoner if an opportunity offered.

Judge Porter followed and said:

Guiteau, the assassin of the President will assassinate no more forever, and the voice which is not silenced now, will be dumb as that of his victim when the end of the law is reached. (Applause.) I say it in view of the condemnation of the American people as represented by their papers; because they did not understand the situation as we did. I have approved, and indicahonor's course down to the time this prisoner proclaimed the act with the acquiescence of his counsel that he had been sane from the hour after he executed this foul, diabolical and infamous murder. When I made this motion I felt that the time had arrived when it was due to the vindication of the American Government, and above all to the vindication of judiciary that the step soould be taken which I er has been playing a part in the court.

Prisoner-A very nice speech but not a word of truth in it. The court then rendered his decision. It was hardly necessary to say that the conduct of the prisoner had been in persistent violation of order and decorum. In the beginning, the only method which could be resorted to, to suppress this disorder, were such as must infringe on the constitutional rights of the prisoner and that was the conclusive argument against them. Until Saturday last, no other method had been this stage of the trial, however, this object seemed to nave been accomplished. The trial was now approaching its close; experts had had ample opportunity to make up their judgment and pronounce them before the court and jury, and it was incumbent on the court now to impose such restraint as the circumstances of the case admitted and which would conduce to orderly conduct of the case. The prisoner had a right to hear the testimony of witnesses, and could not be gagged or sent out of the court; the proper place for a prisoner on trial was in the dock. He could only come within the bar to be arraigned and to receive sentence. If the court granted him the privilege of sitting beside his counsel, it was a privilege which could be withdrawn. While prisoner prisoner to be actuating motives or in-flences that led to his act, then the whole defense would be wiped away at a single stroke. Having accepted counsel, the prisoner had waived his right to appear as such in person. On consideration of all the circumstances, the court thought the motion could have been granted and the prisoner should be placed in the dock, but he did not mean the prisoner use boats.

He then left. His ideas are perfect as respects the granting of a new trial in the opinion of pretty much every member of the bar. District Attorney Corkhill and Judge Davidge both told me they were certain of a verdict of guilty, as indicated from the complexion of the testimony and the weil es-tablished fact of the prisoner's sanity, and their experience in criminal cases. The general belief here is that Scoville would not only have never entered the case but would have thrown it up afterwards, but for the inflence his wife ex-ercised over him. She is master of the domestic circle and does not hold back a jot from bossing matters.

Clearing House.

New York, December 28.-The Public says of the clearing house transactions this week as compared with the corresponding week of last year. While the year closes with disaster in speculations its last week but one being no decrease in volume of legitimate business, but on the contrary, at nearly all the cities and particularly those especially dis-tinguished for manutacturing, the exchanges show larger increases even in comparison with the extraordinary transactions of last December. The comparison embraces six working days of this year against five in 1880, when Christmas fell on Saturday. Every town shows an increase, as follows:

Pittsburg.... Milwaukee. New Haven.... Memphis..... Coaumbus..... Springfield.....

New York, Dec. 28.—Mining stocks to-day were fairly active with continued large transactions. Robinson Consolidated opened at 270 Lacy; K of R. & S., C. C. Gise; M. at and advanced to 335 and closed at 305. A., E. G. Murphy. and advanced to 335 and closed at 305. State Lines numbers two and three, were dull at 150 to 155. Numbers one and four at 24 to 26. Oriental and Miller at 37. Chrysolite advanced from 360 to 460 on small business. Consolidated Virginia declined to 95, Hibernia declined from 33 to 25. Leadville Consolidated declined to 85.
